

Is grief part of your patient's experience?

Recognise grief. Respond appropriately.

Complete your training now.

Search for Recognising and Responding to Grief

Course Code: 482866690

Grief is a common human response to a wide range of health events. The way in which you interact with a person early in the grieving process can influence their long-term health trajectory and outcome. This module will help you to better recognise and respond to grief, whenever and wherever you encounter it.

Through personal stories, expert opinion and guided reflection this module can help you:

- Understand the wide range of losses that can give rise to grief
- Recognise the variety of ways in which grief can present
- Respond appropriately to a person who is grieving
- Refer a grieving person for more support when indicated
- Maintain your own wellbeing while working with people who are grieving.

This module was developed in partnership with the Ministry of Health.