

INTERPROFESSIONAL SEMINAR SERIES

Wednesday
12 December 2018

DIABETIC FOOT DISEASE

Rural clinicians and students are invited to the first in a series of interprofessional workshops designed to increase competence and confidence of rural health care providers. This first session is for health professionals who work with clients at risk of diabetic foot disease.

DIABETIC FOOT CARE

Diabetes High Risk Foot services are a clinical priority area in the NSW Health Leading Better Value Care Program.

The National Evidence Based Guidelines on the Prevention, Identification and Management of Foot Complications in Diabetes Mellitus identifies that foot ulceration is a serious complication which is best managed by a multi- disciplinary foot care team.

WHO IS THIS SEMINAR FOR?

This seminar is for those with an interest in diabetic foot care regardless of their level of experience or the discipline in which they are qualified.

The seminar is designed for:

- Rural Generalists
- Practice managers, nurse practitioners and registered nurses
- Podiatrists, diabetic educators and other allied health providers
- Rural-based students undertaking health related courses
- Other rural-based medical staff

GUEST SPEAKERS

Dr Matthew Malone

Matthew is a leading researcher in diabetic foot infections and the role of biofilms and is a current member of the International Working Group for the Diabetic Foot (IWGDF) diabetic foot infection guidelines working group. He is also a senior lecturer at Western Sydney University.

Saskia Schwarzer

Saskia is a podiatrist involved in the management and treatment of high risk foot patients with diabetic foot ulcers and infection, post amputation, Charcot Neuroarthropathy and peripheral vascular disease.

Charles Davison and Hassan Kadous will also provide an update about the NSW Health Healthy Deadly Feet Project.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

Attendees will:

- Gain an increased awareness of the prevalence, assessment and treatment of diabetes related foot disease.
- Consider effective approaches when working with patients, families and communities to address diabetes related foot care
- Work collaboratively in interprofessional teams to achieve best patient outcomes.
