

MY HEALTH LEARNING

Would you like to be better prepared to talk about perinatal post-mortem with a grieving family?

Having a conversation about a non-coronial perinatal post-mortem with a grieving family is a difficult conversation. The conversation requires a high level of sensitivity. This module demonstrates an example of this conversation, highlighting key content and delivery approaches.

Following a clinician through an example conversation about perinatal post-mortem with a grieving family, this module can help you:

- Appreciate the sensitivity of the conversation
- Prepare for the conversation
- Identify key questions and knowledge required for the conversation.

Developed in partnership with NSW Health Pathology and the Health and Social Policy Branch of NSW Ministry of Health, with funding from the Australian Government.
